1 By order filed November 22, 2006, this Court directed all 2 parties to all the cases herein to show cause "why the Hepting order 3 [entered July 20, 2006, Doc. 308 (in No. C-06-672-VRW), concerning 4 application of the state secrets privilege in an action brought 5 against AT&T] should not apply to all cases and claims to which the 6 government asserts the state secrets privilege." Doc. 79 at 2.

7 The Sprint defendants^{1/} are parties in five of these cases.
8 At this juncture, the United States has not intervened or asserted 9 the state secrets privilege in any of them, although there is reason 10 to believe that it might well do so in some manner at an appropriate 11 time. For now, as to these defendants, the question presented in the 12 abstract by the order to show cause appears both contingent and 13 premature, and not in a posture calling for an immediate answer by an 14 Article III federal court.

15 Be that as it may, there are a number of independent 16 reasons why this Court's July 20, 2006, order in a case against AT&T 17 should not bind these defendants. To minimize repetition of 18 submissions by others, we list here briefly several reasons why 19 Hepting should not and does not apply, also incorporating by 20 reference pertinent authorities submitted by the United States and 21 the other defendants.

22 1. Due Process.

23 At the time of this Court's order in Hepting, July 20, 24 2006, the Sprint defendants were not parties before this Court. The 25 actions against Sprint were not conditionally transferred here by the 26

27 ^{1/} The Sprint defendants are Sprint Nextel Corp., Sprint
28 Communications Co. L.P., Sprint Spectrum L.P. and Nextel West Corp.

MDL Panel until August 31, 2006, and not docketed in this Court until September 25, 2006, and January 25, 2007. Docs. 37, 133. "It is a principle of general application in Anglo-American jurisprudence that one is not bound by a judgment in personam in a litigation in which he is not designated as a party or to which he has not been made a party by service of process." Hansberry v. Lee, 311 U.S. 32, 40 (1940). "The right to a full and fair opportunity to litigate an issue is, of course, protected by the due process clause of the United States Constitution." Hardy v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 681 F.2d 334, 338 (5th Cir. 1982); see also Shaw v. Hahn, 56 F.3d 1128, 1131 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 964 (1995). The Sprint defendants have had no opportunity, much less a "full and fair opportunity," to be heard on either the facts or the law.

(a) Collateral Estoppel. -- Plainly collateral estoppel can have no application. These defendants were not and are not parties to Hepting, nor in privity with AT&T. And there was no final judgment. See Kourtis v. Cameron, 419 F.3d 989, 994 (9th Cir. 2005).

"We have in this nation a deep-rooted historic tradition that everyone should have his own day in court." Headwaters Inc. v. U.S. Forest Service, 399 F.3d 1047, 1050 (9th Cir. 2005) (internal quotation marks omitted). Therefore even after a final determination "[a] judgment or decree among parties to a lawsuit resolves issues as among them but it does not conclude the rights of strangers to those proceedings." Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755, 762 (1989); accord, e.g., Richards v. Jefferson County, 517 U.S. 793, 798 (1996); Kourtis v. Cameron, 419 F.3d at 995.

Although a prior final determination may bind someone in privity with a party, "parallel legal interests alone, identical or

1 otherwise, are not sufficient to establish privity. . . . Both 2 identity of interests and adequate representation are necessary."
3 Kourtis v. Cameron, 419 F.3d at 998 (emphasis in original; internal 4 quotation marks omitted). No allegation has been made that the 5 Sprint defendants controlled in any way AT&T's conduct of the Hepting 6 litigation. See, e.g., Marshak v. Treadwell, 240 F.3d 184, 196 (3d 7 Cir. 2001) (Alito, J.) (collateral estoppel inapplicable even though 8 defendant had testified in prior case and "had an interest in the 9 outcome"); Hardy, 681 F.2d at 339 (no collateral estoppel against 10 asbestos defendants which had not participated in nor controlled 11 prior litigation); In re Air Crash Disaster, 720 F. Supp. 1505, 1521 12 (D. Colo. 1989) (in multidistrict litigation, trial did not 13 collaterally estop parties whose cases were transferred later), rev'd 14 on other grounds sub nom. Johnson v. Continental Airlines Corp., 964 15 F.2d 1059 (10th Cir. 1992).

16 "[L]itigants . . . who never appeared in a prior 17 action -- may not be collaterally estopped without 18 litigating the issue. They have never had a 19 chance to present their evidence and arguments on 20 the claim. Due process prohibits estopping them despite one or more existing adjudications of the identical issue which stand squarely against their position."

21 Blonder-Tongue Labs., Inc. v. University of Ill. Found., 402 U.S.
22 313, 329 (1971).

23 (b) Law of the Case. -- "Law of the case" also has no 24 bearing. Law of the case does not apply to someone else's case.
25 "[T]he phrase, law of the case" refers "to the effect of previous 26 orders . . . in the same case." Messenger v. Anderson, 225 U.S. 436, 27 444 (1912) (Holmes, J.) (emphasis supplied).
28

1 "[L]aw of the case is an amorphous concept. As 2 most commonly defined, the doctrine posits that 3 when a court decides upon a rule of law, that 4 decision should continue to govern the same 5 issues in subsequent stages in the same case."

6 Arizona v. California, 460 U.S. 605, 618 (1983) (emphasis supplied).
7 By definition, law of the case applies "only during the pendency of 8 . . . a single proceeding." Society of Separationists, Inc. v.
9 Herman, 939 F.2d 1207, 1214 (5th Cir. 1991) (emphasis in original; 10 internal quotation marks omitted), aff'd on another point, 959 F.2d 11 1283 (5th Cir. 1992) (en banc). When two cases are "altogether 12 separate proceedings," then "the law of the case" does not apply to 13 the second case even if issues decided in the prior case were 14 identical. Id. See also, e.g., Harbor Ins. Co. v. Essman, 918 F.2d 15 734, 738 (8th Cir. 1990) ("Because the instant case is not the same 16 case . . . the law of the case doctrine does not apply."); Overseas 17 Shipbuilding Group, Inc. v. Skinner, 767 F. Supp. 287, 296 (D.D.C.
18 1991) ("it is hornbook law that the law of the case doctrine operates 19 as a form of issue preclusion within the same case") (emphasis in 20 original).

21 To be sure, all these cases were transferred to this Court 22 to ensure consistent and efficient adjudication of similar issues, 23 and what might turn out to be similar facts. But the five cases in 24 which the Sprint defendants are parties remain separate causes of 25 action, with different plaintiffs and defendants. "[C]onsolidation 26 is permitted as a matter of convenience and economy in 27 administration, but does not merge the suits into a single cause, or 28 change the rights of the parties, or make those who are parties in one suit parties in another." Johnson v. Manhattan Ry., 289 U.S.
 479, 496-97 (1933). Indeed, the plaintiffs themselves have

1 recognized that their complaint "is not intended to effect 2 consolidation for trial of the transferred cases . . . nor to make 3 those who are parties in one transferred case parties in another."
4 Doc. 124 (Sprint Master Compl.), ¶ 2.

5 2. Different Facts.

6 Even if regarded simply as a relevant precedent, the ruling 7 as to AT&T should not control or be automatically adopted. This 8 Court's July ruling in Hepting focused intensely on facts unique to 9 AT&T. This Court referred, for example, to AT&T's "well known" 10 "history of cooperating with the government" on classified matters.
11 Doc. 308 (in No. C-06-672-VRW) at 30. It cited that company's having 12 "recently disclosed that it 'performs various classified contracts, 13 and thousands of its employees hold government security clearances.'" " 14 Id. This Court noted that "in response to reports on the alleged NSA 15 programs," AT&T had issued several statements that it had "an 16 obligation to assist law enforcement and other government agencies 17 responsible for protecting the public welfare, whether it be an 18 individual or the security interests of the entire nation." Id.
19 This Court took judicial notice and quoted such public statements at 20 length. Id. at 30-31. It found significant that AT&T had stated 21 that it "lawfully and dutifully assists the government in classified 22 matters when asked," id. at 31, and that "AT&T at least presently 23 believes that any such assistance would be legal if AT&T were simply 24 a passive agent of the government or if AT&T received a government 25 certification authorizing the assistance," id.

26 In light of such public statements by AT&T -- as well as 27 "the ubiquity of AT&T telecommunications services," id. at 30 -- this 28 Court concluded that "AT&T's assistance in national security

1 surveillance is hardly the kind of 'secret' that the Totten^{2/} bar and 2 the state secrets privilege were intended to protect or that a 3 potential terrorist would fail to anticipate." Id. at 31. "[P]ublic 4 disclosures by the government and AT&T indicate that AT&T is 5 assisting the government to implement some kind of surveillance 6 program." Id. at 34. "[S]ignificant amounts of information about 7 . . . AT&T's intelligence relationship with the government are 8 already nonclassified or in the public record." Id.^{3/}

9 The record as to the Sprint defendants, however, is 10 strikingly different. In the pertinent master complaint:

11 -- There is no allegation that any of these 12 defendants ever stated that it assists the government on 13 classified matters, nor that any of them has an 14 "intelligence relationship" with the government.

15 -- There is no allegation that the United States 16 made any specific disclosures referring to these 17 defendants.

18 -- There is no allegation that these defendants 19 made statements or disclosures regarding involvement in any 20 alleged communications-monitoring or call-records programs.
21 In fact, the complaint filed in one of these cases 22 explicitly alleges that "Sprint has declined to say whether 23 [the] NSA has approached it or how it might have 24

25 ^{2/} Totten v. United States, 92 U.S. 105 (1876).

26 ^{3/} But see El-Masri v. Tenet, 437 F. Supp. 2d 530, 538 (E.D. Va.
27 2006) ("Nor is the strength of the government's [state secrets] 28 privilege somehow diminished by . . . media, government or other reports"), appeal pending sub nom. El-Masri v. United States, No. 06-1667 (4th Cir.).

1 responded." Doc. 1 (in C-06-6295-VRW) ¶ 26; see also id.
2 ¶ 24 (acknowledging that Sprint made "no official comment" 3 in response to allegations in the press).^{4/}

4 3. Plaintiffs' Acknowledgments.

5 Plaintiffs themselves have acknowledged what they call the 6 "dramatically different" circumstances of the array of different 7 defendants in these proceedings. Plaintiffs' counsel explained to 8 this Court that "the factual issues for each of the defendants are 9 actually quite different." Tr. Nov. 17, 2006, at 24. The different 10 carriers, counsel stated, "had different interactions with the 11 government." Id. "[T]he telecommunications companies have said 12 different things about their involvement, some pretty dramatically 13 different things." Id. at 26 (emphasis supplied). "[T]he story for 14 each telecommunications company is likely to be dramatically 15 different and they should be handled differently." Id. (emphasis 16 supplied). See also id. at 25 (suggesting that "it's better to look 17 at what each of these telcos did and said independently"); id. at 24 18 ("different network architectures" and "different structures as 19 telecommunications companies"); cf. Plaintiffs' Opp. to Gov't Motion 20 To Stay, Doc. 128, at 2 ("the facts relevant to the balancing test 21 are different for different defendants").

22 4. Conflict Between Hepting and Terkel.

23 There are more than thirty cases transferred to this Court 24 in these proceedings. Hepting v. AT&T Corp. is not the only one in 25 which a motion to dismiss has been ruled upon. In Terkel v. AT&T 26

27 ^{4/} See also Terkel v. AT&T Corp., 441 F. Supp. 2d 899, 911-12, 915 28 (N.D. Ill. 2006), No C-06-5340-VRW (citing and quoting public statements of Verizon, BellSouth and Qwest).

1 Corp., 441 F. Supp. 2d 899 (N.D. Ill. 2006), now transferred to this 2 Court as No. C-06-5340-VRW, the District Court held that the state 3 secrets privilege does indeed apply to the alleged program, at least 4 with respect to alleged disclosure of call records. "[T]he Court has 5 . . . concluded that the state secrets privilege covers any 6 disclosures that affirm or deny the activities alleged in the 7 complaint." Id. at 918. The court granted the government's motion 8 to dismiss, while allowing leave to amend.^{5/}

9 Hepting has no more claim to govern all the other cases than 10 does Terkel or, for that matter, Al-Haramain, No. C-07-0109-VRW.^{6/} 11 The conflicts in reasoning and result among those rulings confirm the 12 inappropriateness of extending Hepting to other cases.

13 5. Intervening Developments.

14 This Court presciently observed last July, "The court . . .
15 recognizes that legislative or other developments might alter the 16 course of this litigation." Doc. 308 (in C-06-672-VRW) at 36. On 17 January 17, 2007, the Attorney General announced that any electronic 18 surveillance that had occurred previously under the Terrorist 19

20 ^{5/} See also, e.g., 441 F. Supp. 2d at 916 (observing that Hepting 21 "saw no need to dismiss the latter [content-monitoring] 22 allegations at present. This Court does not necessarily agree 23"); id. at 917 ("such disclosures [concerning participation] are barred by the state secrets privilege").

24 ^{6/} Not one but three of these cases arrive carrying lengthy 25 and differing district court opinions that explore the state 26 secrets privilege. In Al-Haramain Islamic Foundation, Inc. v.
27 Bush, 451 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (D. Ore. 2006), No. C-07-0109-VRW, 28 yet another district court offered its own analysis, denying a motion to compel discovery in the face of invocation of the state secrets privilege, and certifying its order for interlocutory appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b). The Ninth Circuit granted review, Nos. 06-36083, 06-80134 (9th Cir.), and stayed further action pending decision of Hepting, No. 06-86083 (9th Cir.) (order of Jan. 9, 2007).

1 Surveillance Program will now be conducted pursuant to orders issued 2 by the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court. Doc. 127. Those 3 orders, their terms and their scope have not been disclosed. Any 4 future assertion of the privilege may be affected by such orders and 5 any accompanying alterations in alleged activities.^{7/}

6 Further, because the United States has not yet intervened 7 nor asserted the state secrets privilege as to the Sprint 8 defendants,^{8/} the manner and scope of any such future assertion cannot 9 be determined or addressed.^{9/} This Court at such time will be able to 10 consider the unique facts material to the Sprint defendants in the 11 concrete context of a fact-specific invocation of the state secrets 12 privilege, if and when the United States actually presents such an 13 assertion.^{10/}

14 6. Uncertainty of Hepting Ruling.

15 This Court's July ruling denying the motions in Hepting 16 does not unquestionably resolve the legal issues, both by its own 17

18 ^{7/} The government has continued to file documents ex parte and 19 under seal to which these defendants are not privy. Whether any 20 of those might affect the circumstances assumed in the Hepting ruling is not known.

21 ^{8/} "[F]urther proceedings in these consolidated actions will 22 immediately require precisely the same privilege assertion 23 raised in Hepting." Motion of United States for Stay, Doc.
67-1, at 17.

24 ^{9/} The Director of National Intelligence who executed the 25 declaration supporting the government's motion to dismiss in Hepting has resigned. Whether his successor would submit a declaration different in any respect cannot be known.

26 ^{10/} The United States were it to assert the privilege in those cases 27 could not be collaterally estopped. United States v. Mendoza, 28 464 U.S. 154, 162-63 (1984). To hold the Sprint defendants but not the United States barred from contesting the July Hepting ruling would be anomalous.

1 terms and because it is on appeal. It is not an exposition of the 2 law so free from doubt that contributions from new parties, 3 elucidating the facts of their own cases and their own legal 4 arguments, can appropriately be dismissed in advance of being made.

5 In the same opinion in which it denied the motions in 6 Hepting, this Court candidly acknowledged that the 7 "issues resolved herein represent controlling 8 questions of law as to which there is a substantial ground for difference of opinion,"

9 Doc. 308 (in No. C-06-672-VRW) at 70, and certified its order for 10 interlocutory appeal. And in its recent January 2007 ruling in two 11 other cases,^{11/} this Court reiterated its own earlier acknowledgment, 12 adding explicitly that

13 "the court's ruling in Hepting does not determine 14 unequivocally the effect of the state secrets 15 privilege, particularly with respect to the present cases."

16 Doc. 130 at 13. Recognizing the same important legal doubt, the 17 Court of Appeals granted leave to appeal, as it also did in Al-18 Haramain, and briefs are due this month. Nos. 06-17132, 06-17137 19 (9th Cir.). When a ruling recognizes such limitations and is under 20 appellate review, that is all the more reason, both for practical 21 reasons and out of fairness, not to hold parties in other cases 22 automatically bound and cut off from any opportunity to add whatever 23 perspectives they might bring.

24 Should the Court of Appeals reverse the ruling as to AT&T 25 in Hepting and order dismissal, it is likely that dismissal of all 26 actions against the Sprint defendants also would be required. Even 27

28 ^{11/} Campbell v. AT&T Communications, No. C-06-3574-VRW, and Riordan
v. Verizon Communications Inc., No. C-06-3596-VRW.

1 if the Court of Appeals were to affirm, its decision likely would 2 provide significant guidance concerning the appropriate legal 3 standards, procedures and analysis to be applied to any future 4 assertion of the state secrets privilege with respect to defendants 5 in other cases, superseding the law as stated in July in Hepting.
6 The appellate decision whatever its holding surely will be relevant 7 to any future proceedings. Last July this Court had no choice but to 8 rule partly in the dark, without appellate guidance. There is no 9 reason to extend such a ruling automatically and prematurely when 10 illumination from the Court of Appeals is in the offing.

11 CONCLUSION

12 For the reasons stated, this Court should not apply the 13 July 2006 Hepting ruling to the actions brought against the Sprint 14 defendants.

15 Respectfully submitted,
